

He accepts that he should have acknowledged it and told you what he was doing with it. He did what he did because he assumed that the police would know more about the matter than he did and no slight was intended on his part. In fact, I do know that he will be writing to you by way of a separate letter to apologise.

I trust that this clarifies the matter for you but I have to say that if what you wanted to meet him about is not to do with the incident that you have told Superintendent Cheer you do not wish to pursue further, then I am not sure what the point of such a meeting is and I am not, therefore, in a position to advise him to do so. There are ways in which you can seek to open up that complaint as Superintendent Cheer may have explained but I shall not go into that, as apparently that is not your intention.

Yours sincerely

Douglas Hayton
Deputy Clerk to the Police Authority
